The Prospect in Maryland.

No State affords a more interesting field for political observation than Maryland. The Republicans are strongly and persis tently pressing the Democrats, and the Democrats show a more seriously disturbed internal condition than is to be found in any party organization in any State, the Ohio Democracy not excepted.

vernor Hamilton's recent indictment of best rule in his party, showing how the had been wronged and crippled and the State robbed, was but one of the incidents of the uncompromising fight within the party. His friends knew that the Gor dents of the uncompromising fight within the party. His friends knew that the Gorman and the was using its great power to defeat Governor Hamilton's renomination. They knew that Gorman's segents, many of them in the employ of the State, were setting up delegates, and there was good reason to believe that unless something heroic were done at once Gorman would continue to hold the organization in the hollow of his hand.

Governor Hamilton's friends to the number of four thousand appealed to him, and his exathing indictment of the ring was the something heroic. Since then the election of delegates has gone on. It is believed that with the exception of one delegate from Calvert county, Gorman has gathered in every one of them. Whether these delegates will be for ex-Congressman McLane or for Mr. Keyser, ex-Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railrad Campany, matters little so long as they are anti-Hamilton men. The Baltimore city primary election is yet to be held, and it is in Baltimore that Hamilton expects to pet the stick to break Gorman's head, Baltimore-can not nominate, but if Hamilton can go before the convention with the solid backing of a constituency which gives the Democratic party its majority in Maryland, his friends think the convention will not dare to turn its back on him.

Action of the convention with the solid backing of a constituency which gives the Democratic party its majority in Maryland, his friends think the convention will not dare to turn its back on him. gives the Democratic party its majority in Maryland, his friends think the convention will not dare to turn its back on him. Bultimore is a point of great interest to

231. Of this majority 9,334 came from the city of Baltimore, leaving him less than aix thousand outside of the city. Half a dozen Democratic counties are very close, and very little would turn them. In every county the Democratic discontent is strong and deep. There is open rebellion sgainst the machine. How much of this will show itself in the election is what the politicians would like to know. Dissensions which have handicapped the Republican party in Maryland have been quieted, very large,y by Mr. Creswell's an-nouncement that he is not a candidate for the United States Senate. The party seems to be united and determined to make the most of a good opportunity. With in-telligent and effect work Maryland can be carried this year, and once carried, Republicans of that State think she can not be carried back. Maryland has eight electoral votes.

Count Horace de Viel-Castel, whose memoirs were recently published, was a decided gourmand. He made a bet once that he would eat a dinner, the cost of which would not be less than 500 fr. He won the wager, going about a hundred france above the stipulated price. He left not a remnant of any dish, nor a drop of wine, and, strange to say, was able to spend the rest of the evening with Earl Granville at the British Embassy.

How Sheep Pay. Form and Gard Despite the constant attention which is called to the value of sheep, not only as improvers of the land, but as profitable farm animals for wool and mutton, there are many farmers who have never raised or kept a single sheep, though their farms are adapted to raising sheep largely and profitably. Why this is we cannot imagine, for facts and figures can be had by the score to prove the profitableness of sheep for facts and figures can be had by the score to prove the profitableness of sheep breeding, if necessary, and about the only drawback in many localities is the loss occasioned by the dogs. Many a rough, worn-out, or neglected farm might be brought up rapidly and be made paying land by treeding sheep thereon, as the mature from the sheep is one of the most enriching of manures, and is evenly and finely distributed. Of course they may not do this without being fed something besides what they can get in the fields, yet this additional food works to the profit of the breeder in two ways—it not only insures good and profitable growth of flesh and wool, but it makes the manure richer and more valuable. Even poor farmers can give sheep a trial by commencing in a small way, and then, as means and experience are gained, the flocks can be gradually increased by purchases, though the natural increase from a small flock of sheep is by no means inconsiderable if properly managed and cared for as they should be. Like any other kind of stock, they must have good care and food to secure the greatest measure of profit.

Strolling through "Mound Cemetery, at Marietta, so called for the ancient earth works, so celebrated in history, concerning which so much has been written, that nearly every child in the country is familiar with it, we came across a peculiarly beautiful monument, made of a granite like sandstone, on which we read the following the sandstone.
